

Top 18 Chickens With Long & Crazy Hair

Are you tired of seeing or raising the same old boring chickens?

Here are the top 18 chickens with long hair, they will amaze you with their cool and wacky hairstyles and produce Enthusiasm in you for raising them.

These chickens with long hair will add five stars to your flock or backyard and amaze your friends.

Chickens with large hair will be the best addition to your flock for ornamental purposes and a mesmerizing appearance.

We will discuss almost all chickens with long hair, and we are confident that at least two or three breeds will surprise you.

Let's get started!

1: Yokohama Chickens

Yokohama chickens are a fancy breed that originated in Germany. They are well known for their unique coloring and exceptionally long tails.

Hugo du Roi created Yokohama chickens in the 1880s. These ornamental birds were imported to Europe from Japan during the latter half of the nineteenth century.

Their alert demeanor and game-like appearance characterize them. While these chickens are not prolific layers, they lay only 60-80 small, cream/tinted color eggs yearly. They tend to go broody after laying just 12 to 14 eggs.

2: Onagadori Chickens

Onagadori chickens are well known for their enormous and unique tails, which grow continuously and reach up to 27 feet.

These chickens need perches or rods for standing or sitting, and let their long tail flow freely.

Onagadori are also fascinatingly gorgeous birds, which mesmerize any flock or backyard.

3: Phoenix Chickens

Phoenix chickens originated from Japan and Germany; Phoenix is a breed of long-tailed chickens.

These chickens are used for ornamental and exhibition breeds, characterized by their alert and pheasant-like appearance.

Phoenix chickens have a single bright red comb with five upright points, vibrant red wattles, oval white earlobes, reddish-brown eyes, and light to dark blue toes.

They are notable for their wide sickle feathers, reaching lengths ranging from 2 to 5 feet.

Also, the feathers on the saddles of these chickens are typically between 12 and 18 inches, contributing to their unique and special appearance.

4: Sultan Chickens

Sultan chickens originated in Turkey; they are well known for their exceptional, unique, and loving appearance.

Although they have many feathers on their heads, muffs, and feet, they look adorable and beautiful overall.

They have calm and friendly personalities. Their unique characteristics and mesmerizing look make them perfect for poultry keepers.

5: Cochin Chickens

Cochin breeds are very popular in the United States, and their origin is China, which is known for its fluffy and large number of feathers.

In contrast to regular chickens, hens have many feathers covering their overall body, making them appear cute and beautiful.

They are very calm and quiet birds. They don't disturb their friends, especially during their laying time and even during your work time.

The average Cochin chicken can weigh up to 10 pounds. They will also be the broodiest breed in your flock or backyard.

6: Brahma Chickens

Brahmas are giant fluffy chickens, mainly because their feet are full of feathers, which makes them look cute and beautiful.

Brahmas are big chickens. They can weigh up to 8 - 10 lbs, and most of their size comes from their large number of feathers.

From neck to feet, they are full of feathers. They are gentle and perfect birds for families with children or individuals with little time for care.

Brahma chickens are reasonable egg layers that lay 3-4 brown eggs weekly.

As these chickens are big, they eat a lot, so ensure you feed them well-formulated, nutrient-dense foods.

7: Silkies Chickens

Silkies are most popular for their cute and sweet appearance, which makes any flock awesome.

They are extra fluffy and fuzzy feathers that cover their entire body, including their head and feet.

Silkie chickens are friendly and docile. They love to play with or around you, even with your children.

8: Frizzle Chickens

Frizzle chickens look super fuzzy, and their thin feathers don't help keep them warm.

As frizzle chickens have thin feathers, they also don't fly well.

Frizzle chickens can be found in various breeds, such as Polish, Cochins, and Silkies.

Point to remember!

Technically, Frizzle chickens are not a breed, but the name refers to their cute, curly, and unique feathers.

9: Polish Chickens

Polish chickens are popular in America because of their unique, mesmerizing look and shy behavior.

Polish chickens are known for their unique and beautiful crest, which covers the tops of their heads. Sometimes, this wild crest blocks their vision.

They are perfect for ornamental purposes as they look like flowers that walk and run in your backyard or a flock.

10: Faverolle Chickens

Faverolles chickens are known for their notable muffs and beards covering their entire faces in fluff. Their fluffiness extends to their feathered legs, creating a lovable and unique look.

These chickens are sweet, friendly, and goofy. They love being with you and even your children.

Faverolle is an adaptable bird breed that fits in any flock, backyard environment, and area.

The most popular color variety of Faverolle chickens is salmon, but they also come in various colors, such as white, mahogany, cuckoo, and splash.

Faverolle lays between 13 and 17 tinted brown eggs per month.

11:Ameraucana Chickens

Ameraucana chickens have fluffy bodies and tails, huge muffs, and a beard, which gives them an aesthetic appearance.

However, Ameraucana chickens are well known for their stunning blue egg-laying ability,

Their aesthetic look makes any flock or backyard stunning and also makes your friends.

They are gentle birds with a calming presence, soft coos, and stylish movements.

Ameraucana chickens come in different colors, but still, they lay their signature blue eggs.

12: Ayam Cemani Chickens

Ayam Cemani chickens are from Indonesia, all black from head to tail to toes.

They have black feathers, skin, and faces. Some navy-tinted birds are present, but they are rare.

Ayam Cemani chickens are all black. This is due to fibromatosis, a condition that causes excess dark coloring.

As a result, their meat, feathers, and even bones appear entirely black. Their all-black appearance earned them the nickname "Lamborghini chicken".

13: Thuringian Chickens

Thuringian Chickens originated from Germany; they are a scarce breed with an undeniably amusing appearance.

Their fluffy beards and muffs contribute to a super-friendly and delightful look.

They are good foragers and love to search for their food. The Thuringian breed might be a perfect fit for your flock or backyard.

14: Wyandotte Chickens

Wyandotte chickens are well known for their signature lacing feathers; they have bulky feathers that make them unique among any flock.

These chickens are good and reliable layers that lay 3-4 brown or cream-colored eggs weekly.

Wyandotte chickens are available in different colors like Silver-laced, Gold-Laced, Blue-Laced, and Red-Laced.

They are friendly and docile birds, perfect for newbies or beginners. They are the ideal addition to your flock for special ornamental purposes.

15: Crevecoeur Chickens

The Crevecoeur breed originated in France, and they tend to be very popular in their native country.

Their names are taken from a small town located in Normandy.

They have a wild-looking crest on their heads, are solid or complete black, have moderate-sized bodies, and have calm demeanors or temperaments.

16: Houdan Chickens

Houdan chickens originated in France; they have black feathers with white lines and interlaced speckles.

Their large, fluffy crest on their heads adds a unique touch to their beauty.

The interesting fact about Houdan chickens is that they have 5 toes, while regular chickens have 4, which makes them unique compared to other birds.

17: Pavlovskaya Chickens

Pavlovskaya is the oldest breed in Russia; these chickens are rarely known outside their native country.

These chickens have 3 to 4 feather colors and several more unique feathering qualities and characteristics.

Pavlovskaya chickens showcase a wild-looking mop of feathers on their heads, complemented by charming beards, muffs, and lovely plumage gracing their adorable little feet.

18: Serama Chickens

Serama chickens are the smallest breed in the world and are from Malaysia. They have a very human-like appearance.

They are well known for their upright posture, well-developed breasts, vertically held tails that stand upright at about 6 inches, and wings positioned vertically, nearly touching the ground.

As they are miniature chickens, the male Serama weighs between 1 and 1.20 lbs, and the female Serama weighs between 0.5 and 0.80 lbs.

Final Thoughts

Above are the top chickens with long hair or feathers, each with unique characteristics and a mesmerizing appearance.

If you want to raise or keep one of these chickens with long hair, select one that fits you and then raise or keep it.

What's one chicken you want to add to this list?